Flag Day, which takes place annually on June 14, is an oft-forgotten holiday, once called the “runty stepchild among American national holidays” in the New York Times. This year’s celebration of the holiday might go unnoticed, but its history is layered with politics and patriotism — and it’s probably not what you’d expect.

First of all, the meaning of the American Flag was a lot different when the original banner was designed in 1776. Despite all the symbolism it has acquired over the years, the flag wasn’t actually created to be a symbol of patriotism. Rather, though patriotism levels were high during the American revolution, flags were seen as articles of military equipment that were essential for identification and communication, says Marla Miller, a University of Massachusetts history professor and author of Betsy Ross and the Making of America.

“Flag makers like Elizabeth Ross — and she was by no means the only woman making flags in Revolutionary Philadelphia — thought of themselves as suppliers of military goods,” Miller says.

So it makes sense that the idea of celebrating the flag wouldn’t have come up until much later.

“People associate our love of the flag with 1776 and the American Revolution,” explains Adam Goodheart, the author of 1861: The Civil War Awakening, “when it actually has perhaps more to do with 1861 and the Civil War.”

The holiday was originally proposed in a newspaper editorial in June of 1861 by Charles Dudley Warner, an editor of the Hartford Evening Press. (He would go on to co-author The Gilded Age with Mark Twain a decade later.) Warner suggested that the stars and stripes “be recognized wherever the American flag floats.” Goodheart says it’s no coincidence that the holiday was proposed in 1861, just two months after the attack on Fort Sumter that started the Civil War.

“It was a moment when the American flag really had the biggest transformation in its history,” he says. “It went from something that was a patriotic symbol and a marker of federal territory, buildings and ships and military use, to being something that was really widely used as a beloved banner for ordinary Americans as well.”

And, as Goodheart points out, there was a commercial element too: during the Civil War, flag manufacturers were making a fortune on flags, and it’s no coincidence that the holiday was proposed in New England, the center of the textile industry. There, for the first time, various dyeing and printing techniques made it easier to mass-produce flags of all sizes. Before that period, flags were made by stitching together fields of solid fabric. Each star had to be individually cut out and sewn on. By the Civil War era, however, it was possible to print the colors onto one piece of fabric. “It was really something very new,” Goodheart says, “so the holiday was driven by commercialization, technology, politics, patriotism—all this stuff coming together and crystallizing in one historical moment.”

Eyewitness to Crime

The elderly man was an eyewitness to the car shop crime scene.

No Parking Area's

We are noticing more and more vehicles parking in the NO PARKING AREA in the entrance driveways. These areas are to be left open for the safety of tenants and for emergency vehicle's to enter should they need to. If you have visitor's, please ask them to park on the street!

Thank you!

June Is Alzheimer's And Brain Awareness Month:

Every three seconds someone in the world develops dementia, with nearly 50 million people currently living with the disease worldwide. Perhaps more alarmingly, that number is expected to reach 132 million by 2050.

Dementia is a brain condition that affects parts of the brain that control thought, memory, and language. and Alzheimer's disease is the most common form of dementia. While the risk of developing Alzheimer's disease increases with age, Alzheimer's disease is not considered a "normal" part of aging. Most people living with Alzheimer's disease are older than 65 years; however, people younger than age 65 can develop Alzheimer's disease (though it is not common.)

In the early stages of the disease, these can include:

- Getting lost in familiar places
- Having trouble handling money and paying bills
- Repeating questions
- Taking longer to complete normal daily tasks
- Displaying poor judgment
- Losing things or misplacing them in odd places
- Displaying mood and personality changes

"Sir, my concern is not whether God is on our side; my greatest concern is to be on God's side, for God is always right."
Abraham Lincoln

A man and his ever-nagging wife went on vacation to Jerusalem. While they were there, the wife passed away. The undertaker told the husband, "You can have her shipped home for $5,000, or you can bury her here, in the Holy Land, for $150." The man thought about it and told him he would just have her shipped home. The undertaker asked, "Why would you spend $5,000 to ship your wife home, when it would be wonderful to be buried here and you would spend only $150?"

The man replied, "Long ago a man died here, was buried here, and three days later he rose from the dead. I just can't take that chance.."
