September 22nd Fall Begins

*Harvest Festival
comes around.
Bushes of blackberries
can be found.*

*For some the school
days have begun.
The summer holiday
has been and gone.*

*September, October
bring darker nights.
A warmer coat to wrap up tight.*

*The insects now seem far and few,
the trees grow bare,
a sky less blue.*

*First came Spring,
then Summer sun.
Now the Autumn
has begun.*

*I always start running in
the fall—not all of me,
just my nose.*

National Back To School Month

A YOUNG FEMALE teacher in a long black dress yanks hard on the clanging school bell to greet her students. Just hours ago she rolled out of the same bed she shared with two girl students, because half of her stipend is the free lodging provided by that local family's farmhouse.

Soon the students from ages 4 to 18 answer the bell, and the young ladies line up first in their prairie dresses in front of the one-room schoolhouse. They're followed by the young gentlemen, with overalls that have been muddied by all the farming chores at the crack of dawn. They put their coats and tin lunch pails in the hallway vestibule and get ready for a long day of lessons.

They recite the Pledge of Allegiance, but "under God" won't be part of our patriotic oath for decades. After she plays the piano for their morning songs, that strict schoolmarm will check boys' fingernails, and if any dirt remains from the farm, they'll have to pump the water from the well and scrub their hands with lye soap .

Portraits of Presidents Washington and Lincoln hang on the wall by the 37-star American flag in the small classroom, where the young gentlemen sit across from the young ladies. Any misbehaving fellow will be exiled over with the young ladies, or if he's really out of line, he'll head over to the dunce stool, or perhaps even feel the sting of a wooden paddle. There's no electricity, and an early burst of winter whips into the room. Thankfully, their teacher has already loaded up the wood in the pot-bellied stove, though that won't help a shivering child in the outhouse.

The schoolchildren sit erect in their chairs, poised with chalk in their hands ready to "compute" their addition and subtraction and multiplication tables on their little slate boards. After the spelling lessons, they'll dip turkey-quill pens into inkwells for their cursive penmanship practices.

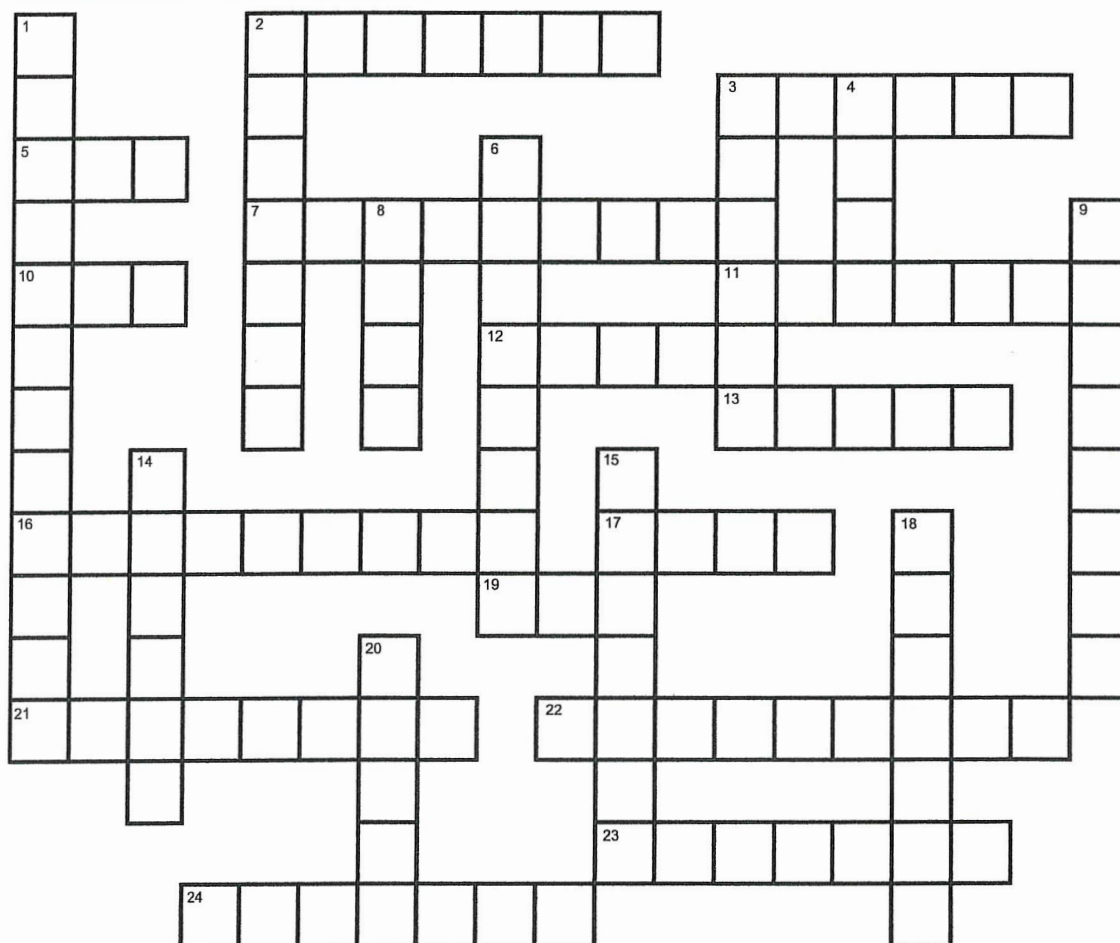

Then minds start to daydream about those lunches packed by their mothers in tobacco tins and peanut butter cans. They might get fried chicken, hard boiled eggs, or rolled-up pancakes with jam left over from breakfast, and for a lucky few there's a special treat: the lard sandwich.

In the years after Nebraska Territory was formed, rural educations and one-room schoolhouses taught children about the difficult-but-good life. By 1918 our state had nearly 7,000 of these little houses on the prairie. After America finally graduated from the Great Depression, one-room schoolhouses started vanishing almost as fast as bison did the previous century.

But Nebraska held tight to its past, and in 1986, it still had 385 one-room schoolhouses. That was more than any other state and 45 percent of the entire U.S. total. Two decades later, they were all gone. The reclassification policy placed the schools in larger districts instead of the tiny villages that sometimes had just one student in the entire school.

It's football season!

Time to have a Tailgate Party!

September 14th @ 12PM

GHA will be providing the meat if you would like to bring a side dish or dessert!

Lunch with this group of ladies is never dull! We had a great time reminiscing about the naughty things some did to their siblings and parents to the good times some got to spend with their grandparents/great-grandparents back in the good old days! Thanks for the laughs ladies!

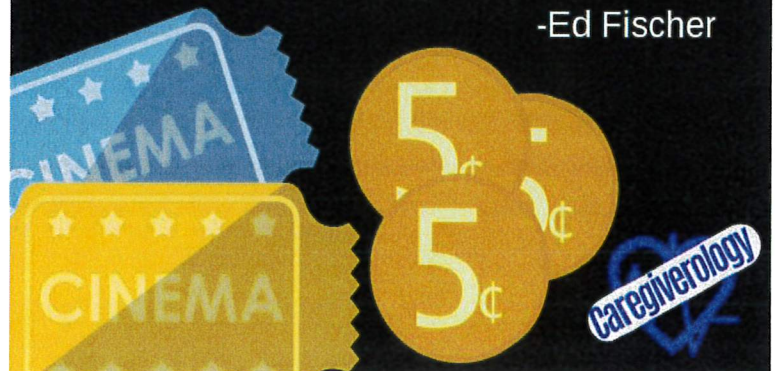

The best things about the good old days was that I wasn't good and I wasn't old.

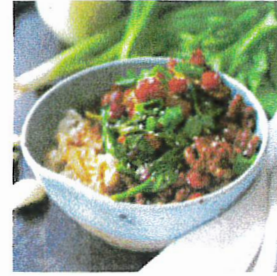

Joe was the type who loved to talk about the good old days. At a movie, he told the girl who handed him his five-dollar ticket, "I can remember when a movie ticket was only fifteen cents." "You're really going to enjoy this movie then, sir," said the ticket girl. "We have sound now."

Scattered Sites

And all at once, summer collapsed into fall!

Fall is arriving and the leaves will be falling. Remember, you must not pile your grass, branches or leaves on Housing Authority property! They have to be hauled away! Grass clippings, leaves and branches may be taken to the compost site located southwest of town. Please pick up the toys and miscellaneous items in the yard before the snow falls as well. Also, anything pertaining to spring and summer needs to be put away for the winter.

Please remember to clean out your gutters , flower beds and pots and continue to water your yard while it is still nice!

Yard of the Month

Congratulations to August's Yard of the Month Winner for keeping up their yard all summer!!! The family has been awarded Swede Bucks for keeping such a beautiful and well maintained yard!

THANK YOU for all of your hard work!!

08 04 2022

It's that time of the year! The kiddos are back in school! If you are in need of school supplies you may not have gotten, stop by the office to see what we have left in stock to help you out!

HVAC System

To most efficiently use the AC/Furnace, remember to clean the register in the wall above your furnace. When using your AC/Furnace, remember to keep your doors and windows closed to get the most efficient use. It is best to set your thermostat at one temperature and leave it there and not continue to turn it up and down.

Please clean out your dryer vents! This will help save you money with more efficient airflow, extend your dryer life, and reduce the risk of a fire starting should the vent get full and air cannot pass through. Do not leave your dryer on if you should leave the unit!

Dryer Cleaning Tips

WIN
HOME INSPECTION

DID YOU KNOW? EVERY YEAR, OVER 2900 PEOPLE EXPERIENCE A DRYER RELATED FIRE IN THEIR HOME.

Small pieces of lint can pass through the lint screen and build up in the vent overtime. This build up becomes a fire risk when heat and sparks are generated during dryer cycle.

Why Do You Need to Clean the Dryer Vent?

Clean the vent once a season, or at least at the beginning and end of winter (when the dryer sees the most usage). The more you use your dryer, the more often you will need to clean.

How Often Should You Clean Your Vent?

Clean the lint trap after every use, and keep the area around the dryer clear of dust. Also keep the area around external vent clean and use a vent cover to protect against debris.

How Can You Reduce Lint Buildup?

September 22nd Fall Begins

*Harvest Festival
comes around.
can be found.*

*For some the school
days have begun.
The summer holiday
has been and gone.*

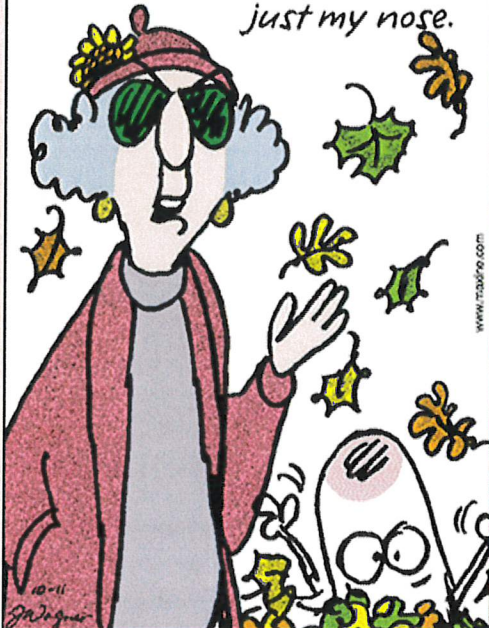

*September, October
bring darker nights.
A warmer coat to wrap up tight.*

*The insects now seem far and few,
the trees grow bare,
a sky less blue.*

*First came Spring,
then Summer sun.
Now the Autumn
has begun.*

*I always start running in
the fall—not all of me,
just my nose.*

WHAT KIND OF VEST
SHOULD YOU WEAR
IN THE FALL?

A HAR-VEST!

has about had it.

looking too good

National Back To School Month

A YOUNG FEMALE teacher in a long black dress yanks hard on the clanging school bell to greet her students. Just hours ago she rolled out of the same bed she shared with two girl students, because half of her stipend is the free lodging provided by that local family's farmhouse.

Soon the students from ages 4 to 18 answer the bell, and the young ladies line up first in their prairie dresses in front of the one-room schoolhouse. They're followed by the young gentlemen, with overalls that have been muddied by all the farming chores at the crack of dawn. They put their coats and tin lunch pails in the hallway vestibule and get ready for a long day of lessons.

They recite the Pledge of Allegiance, but "under God" won't be part of our patriotic oath for decades. After she plays the piano for their morning songs, that strict schoolmarm will check boys' fingernails, and if any dirt remains from the farm, they'll have to pump the water from the well and scrub their hands with lye soap .

Portraits of Presidents Washington and Lincoln hang on the wall by the 37-star American flag in the small classroom, where the young gentlemen sit across from the young ladies. Any misbehaving fellow will be exiled over with the young ladies, or if he's really out of line, he'll head over to the dunce stool, or perhaps even feel the sting of a wooden paddle. There's no electricity, and an early burst of winter whips into the room. Thankfully, their teacher has already loaded up the wood in the pot-bellied stove, though that won't help a shivering child in the outhouse.

The schoolchildren sit erect in their chairs, poised with chalk in their hands ready to "compute" their addition and subtraction and multiplication tables on their little slate boards. After the spelling lessons, they'll dip turkey-quill pens into inkwells for their cursive penmanship practices.

Then minds start to daydream about those lunches packed by their mothers in tobacco tins and peanut butter cans. They might get fried chicken, hard boiled eggs, or rolled-up pancakes with jam left over from breakfast, and for a lucky few there's a special treat: the lard sandwich.

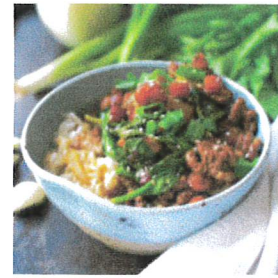

In the years after Nebraska Territory was formed, rural educations and one-room schoolhouses taught children about the difficult-but-good life. By 1918 our state had nearly 7,000 of these little houses on the prairie. After America finally graduated from the Great Depression, one-room schoolhouses started vanishing almost as fast as bison did the previous century.

But Nebraska held tight to its past, and in 1986, it still had 385 one-room schoolhouses. That was more than any other state and 45 percent of the entire U.S. total. Two decades later, they were all gone. The reclassification policy placed the schools in larger districts instead of the tiny villages that sometimes had just one student in the entire school.
